Kate Miller says there have been probably 100,000 people on the fringes of homelessness and no shelter since the end of the war. As director of BCCP (Battering Out Children Program) for the past five years, Miller has created a way to be a resource for many young men and women who are homeless. She has the problems and make their own choices.

A social worker diploma from Conestoga College, Dean Cooper taught her to be a little wild at BCCP's first location 40 Columbia St. Katerine Miller says she was a college graduate because she was more interested in the practical than the theory of social work. She says she was a social worker for five years and she was a social worker for five years.

"I didn't want to be a social worker," she said. "I wanted to be a social worker." She says she was a social worker for five years and she was a social worker for five years.

In 1987, a year before she graduated, a friend called her and said, "Mike, I'm homeless. I need a place to live." She says she was a social worker for five years and she was a social worker for five years.

March against discrimination

By Marianna Brooks

There's little need to organize a march for international students here, but April and now the two are saying Chicago students will join a day on March 21 to end racial discrimination.

"The objective is to end racial discrimination and to highlight the fact that if people could only look at what people are like, they would be able to see the difference of their skin," Kralik said.

Kralik said he and his friends have been asked to march in the city and to be seen in the city. He said he and his friends are not going to be seen in the city. He said he and his friends are not going to be seen in the city.

The students are sometimes very highly educated and are here to study. They are not here to be seen in the city. They are not here to be seen in the city.

Tax Tips for your 1990 Return

"Why should I file a tax return if I don't owe anything?"

Revenue Canada doesn't just collect taxes. It also delivers federal and provincial credits you could receive from. Including the goods and services tax credit, the children's credit, and the year-to-date federal sales tax credit. But if you don't file a tax return because you don't owe anything, you could miss out.

Is tax filing easier this year?

Revenue Canada has introduced new measures to simplify the tax filing process. The government's plan to simplify the tax filing process. The government's plan to simplify the tax filing process. The government's plan to simplify the tax filing process.

Get some tips?

First, look in the Guide that comes in your tax package. It gives you step-by-step instructions and helpful tips. Read the explanations for the credits applied to you, and know those that don't. If your income situation hasn't changed much from last year, you can use last year's return as a reference.

What if I have questions?

If you can't find the answers in the Guide, you can call the people at Revenue Canada. The best number to get through are before 10:00 a.m. and after 2:00 p.m. from February 26 through April 30. Revenue Canada's phone hours are extended to 8:00 p.m. Monday to Thursday. There's also an automated phone service called TIPS, for answers to common questions. For a complete list of services and phone numbers in your region, see your Guide.

What other services are available?

You can visit the local Tax Assistance Centres in convenient locations like shopping malls for information, guides and forms. See your local newspaper for the times and locations. There's also a video called "Shopping Through Your Tax Return" that you can borrow from public libraries in your district location office.

Anything I should watch for?

Make sure all the personal information printed on your return is correct, especially your address. Before you start, make sure you have all your receipts and information ready. Check your calculations, and attach all the information forms asked for in the return. These steps will help avoid delays in getting your refund.

If I move, will I still get my cheque?

If you're moving, call or write Revenue Canada with your new address. Be sure you make sure you change your address. Be sure you make sure you change your address. Be sure you make sure you change your address.

Conestoga graphics show a hit with Toronto audience

by Andy Miller

Attendance was at its best for the third annual Conestoga College graphic design student show held at the Type Centre, 250 King St. E., Toronto.

Opening night was March 8, with wine and cheese served to invited guests. More than 100 guests attended the function.

Between third-year graphic design students displays of two panels each of their work, work from the past three years. The panels were on display in the gallery from March 7 to March 9, open to the public from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. One thousand brochures were sent to prospective employers.

Planning for the show began last fall. Displaying work as the annual exhibition is not a course requirement for students. "January and February the work load becomes heavy with organizing everything, completing work and making sure it is in presentation form," said Alan Miller, graphic design faculty member.

In the past the show has been financially supported by the school, but this year it was completely funded by the students. Funds were raised by a recent pub held at the Twist and a bag draw. Some money was donated by corporate sponsors. The Artisans of Waterloo Ltd., Associates Design & Communications Inc. and Douglas Patchford Associates Ltd. donated $2,000 and $2,500 was needed to fund the show. "It is no longer in the budget," said Miller. "With budget cuts it was the first to go."

The show is held in Toronto because of the size of its graphic design community. "In the five cities there wasn't enough of a graphic design community to attract people," said Miller. "More will go from Rochester to Toronto. More and more places are opening up here."

The show began three years ago and was an idea of a third-year graphic design student. As part of the course, students are required to prepare a package that can be sent to prospective employers to promote themselves. Rochester was suggested for the show, but Miller pointed out that Rochester is not where most of the students will be working. Miller suggested the third floor Type Center in Toronto as being an ideal place for a show. After a few phone calls the centre agreed to use some of the students' work. They liked the samples and agreed to have the show. Shows are held at the Type Center from all over the world. Other upcoming graphic design shows include Reykjavik, Okla-Homa, a show of professional graphic designers from the western provinces beginning next week and others.

Miller is optimistic of the students' chances for employment. "It is a tight labour year with more unemployed," said Miller. "Businesses tend to hire juniors because they can get them at a good price. Some hire on a freelance basis. No one will be hired on just what is at the show. It is just
